HOW A DOLLAR GREW

History of a Prize Dollar Won by a Little Girl in a Press Story Contest

GREW RAPIDLY FROM $1.00 TO $41.85

Murphysboro, Ill., Feb. 9th.
DEAR EDITOR:—If you will allow me space in your valuable paper I will tell you how a dollar grew.
Some two or three years ago you requested the little folks to write stories to the Press. So after reading several stories from the little children, I decided to write one.
While I was trying to think of some subject to write on, I noticed a wren's nest in a carpet that was hanging on the garden fence. So while I was helping mamma or answering my little crippled sister I thought I would write a story "A Wren's Nest in a Carpet." I wrote it and sent it in and after waiting some three or four weeks I saw that my story was published. Imagine how proud I felt, if you can, when I saw my story in the Press. Oh, how happy I felt!
Well, as days and months went by I saw in the Press that the Editor wanted my address, said I was the winner of third prize which was a dollar. So I tried to buy a pig with the dollar but could find no dollar pigs, so I loaned the dollar out for six months and took for interest fifteen eggs. I set the eggs under one of mamma's hens and raised ten chicks and sold them for $3.00, took $2.40 and bought two pigs, kept them a little over a year and sold them for $41.85.
So, Mr. Jenkins, I thought you would like to know what I did with the dollar. I would like to know what the other little folks did with their money.
Wishing the Press success I remain, your little friend
VIRGIL LOVE.

A Letter From Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 30, 1907.
Mr. S. M. Jenkins, Marion, Ky:
Dear Sir:—I am living in the land of Dixie now and think that it is a grand old place. It is summer time down here now, we have not had any weather cold enough to remind me of old Kentucky. I received the dear old Press and was sure glad to get it, please do not fail to send it every week as it is just like a letter from home. I have met lots of people down here from Marion. I called on Miss Rosa and Morris Schwab a few days ago, they both have nice positions.

Well about all a stranger sees in Memphis is negroes, mules and cotton and street cars.

I go out nearly every day and take a look at the Mississippi river. It is already awful high and is still rising. Well I got to see the man walking the Mississippi river. It was sure real amusing to watch him walk along on top of the water.

I will close hoping the Press and its many readers a happy and prosperous year. I am your truly,
CRAWFORD HUGHES.

TEXAS LANDS.

Canyon City, Tex., Jan. 10, 1907.

DEAR EDITOR:—Will you permit me to say to your readers, a few things about our country. When I was in old Crittenden last June on a visit for my first time since leaving there in 1875 I was very forcibly impressed with the need of many of your citizens, seeking a new country and doing so at once.

I recall the instance of old uncle Ed McCleskey, in 1874, selling out there and moving to Texas by wagon, resulted in my father following suit the next year. Also Silas McMurray, Frank Cruce, John Zimmerman and others.

I shall always bless the day that uncle turned this way. We settled in Erath county, Texas, and remained there on one tract of land until ten years ago when I moved to this country. After trying the plains I really feel as though I have lost the 21 years spent in Erath county, for there it required so much expenditure of money and labor to prepare the land for the plow while here it is already clear, absolutely no obstructions, level, and no floods to wash away the soil.

I have been engaged more or less for the last five years in buying and selling lands and cattle, I do not recall to mind a single instance where the man to whom I sold land has not either sold or can sell at a fancy profit. Example:—Four years ago I sold a section of land 6 miles of Canyon to W. P. Orr, of Stephenville, Texas, at $2.75 per acre, he has not expended a dollar on it except for taxes (this is only $10 per section per year) and he has refused ten dollars per acre. I sold a section last spring (to Mr. Mercer, of Iowa,) four miles from Canyon City where I live at $14 per acre and he now refuses $20 per acre. I can furnish many other such instances.

Real estate of all kinds have greatly advanced and will yet advance even more rapidly; for this country is just now beginning to attract attention abroad, and the eyes of the world are turned this way. Poor men are seeking a country where it is possible for them to own their homes while men of wealth are looking for investment; and they know that for a safe and sure one nothing beats good lands. I am a land agent but am sincere in all that I have said. I invite you to come and investigate and you will find that it is even better than I have represented. The average yield of wheat last year (1906) was 24 bushels per acre in my county (and in some instances it yielded 49 bushels per acre) and sold at an average price of 70 cts per bushel. These choice lands every foot tillable, can be bought now from $10 to $25 per acre. Come to see us and we will verify all we have said.

COPHER-FERRELL

Miss Atta Copher and Mr. Orville Ferrell, Married Feb. 11th.

One of the greatest surprises of the season was the marriage of Miss Atta Copher to Mr. Orville Ferrell, Monday evening Feb. 11th, 1907, at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's father, Rev. Virgil Elgin, officiating.

A few of the neighbors and Miss Copher's immediate friends were present.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. W. H. Copher, of this city, and has won many admirers by her quiet and unassuming manner. She has a host of friends here who regret to give her up.

Mr. Ferrell is of the firm of Patterson and Ferrell, in Harrisburg, Ill. He is a very prosperous and promising young man, and we feel that he is certainly to be congratulated upon winning Miss Copher for his bride.

They left Tuesday morning for Harrisburg, where they will make their home.

The PRESS-RECORD extends congratulations and best wishes.

CHURCH NOTES

The sermon at the Presbyterian church last Sunday was on the text found in Isaiah 62:2. "Thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name." The subject was to show the great advantage of being named after the Savior of the world.

The name of a man has much to do with his life and especially that of the Christian. Paul said "Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." 2 Tim. 2:19. Frequently men say that they are not Christians, thinking it is an honor to be reckoned among those who deny Christ. In the last day it will make all the difference what a man's name is.

The question that decides our eternal fate is whether or not we are named after the name of Christ. If we have the name of Christ stamped upon us, we will be saved by Christ. If not we will be eternally lost.

Next Sunday a protracted meeting will begin at the Baptist church. Dr. W. D. Powell, of Louisville, State Evangelist, will assist, and do the preaching. The public invited.

IMPOSSIBLE TO TEACH A SUMMER NORMAL

Unavoidable Circumstances Have Arisen That Makes it Impossible for Prof. V. G. Kee to Teach

TEACHERS MAY ENTER HIGH SCHOOL

Prof. Kee authorizes us to say that circumstances have arisen that render it impossible for him to teach a normal this summer. If there are any young teachers who are depending on this, rather than have them discouraged, they may enter the High School now and he will arrange for them work suited to their needs by allowing them to omit the Latin, but no regular course in pedagogy can be undertaken. He is willing to instruct on Saturdays any who are disposed to enter under the conditions. Of course, he would gladly give regular teachers' training work now if the crowded condition of the school permitted. But the Superintendent and Board of Education deem it best not to undertake teachers' training work during the regular session.

This Year a Record Breaker

Since last report there has been eight new students at Marion Graded Schools, making a grand total 491. Last year the enrollment for the year only reached 485. So this year will easily be a record breaker. Prof. Kee has the promise of a number of new students right away and thinks he will enroll 500.

DYCUSBURG.

Mrs. Nora Manus who resides one and a half miles from town is dangerously ill. Drs. T. L. Phillips, of Dycusburg, Dorroh, of Kelsey, and Wilford, of Kuttawa, are the attending physicians. She is one of the most attractive and highly esteemed ladies in our community and many anxiously wait for tidings concerning her precarious condition. A beautiful baby girl is one of the special charges of those who attend her bedside.

Married at Lynnvile, Feb. 6th, Miss Minnie Wheeler, of that place, and Mr. Percy Brasher, of Crittenden county. The bride and groom are at home to their friends at their home near Dycusburg.

Married at Metropolis, Ill., Feb. 6th, 1907, Mr. Robt. Steele, eldest son of Mr. Geo. Steele, postmaster at Dycusburg, and Miss Cash, of Lyon county. The wedding was in the nature of a surprise to their friends here.

Mrs. Dora Charles and children are visiting Mrs. Fannie Charles at Tiline.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Dycusburg Methodist Church will give a Valentine Bazar at the City Hall the evening of the 14th. Some of the best taste and talent of the county will contribute to the occasion and indications are auspicious.

Rev. Jas. Oliver was with his congregation at the Baptist church Saturday and Sunday.

Our popular young cashier of the Dycusburg Bank has been at his post every day since he was so seriously wounded in the bank two weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Pickering and Mr. and Mrs. Cleve Martin have removed to the old Pickering home.

Mrs. J. M. Graves is on the sick list.

S. H. Cassidy is seriously ill this week.

Mrs. Turley and son, Corbet, were guests of Mrs. Longston last week.

Raymond, little son of J. R. Pilant, was quite sick this week.

M. B. Charles, of Mississippi, spent several days with relatives here last week. On his return to Mississippi he expects to enter upon his duties at Brookhaven as bank cashier and will not possibly find it convenient to visit Dycusburg friends and relatives soon again.

John Hill and family, of Bowling Green, visited relatives here last week.

Miss Lula Wheeler and Mr. Willard McGomery have entered college at Bowling Green.

The witnesses who attended the examining trial at Marion Monday, resulted in varied experiences and the town was almost depopulated.

Chas. Bennett is indisposed.

Mr. Val Frasier and son passed down on the Str. Burtoff Sunday enroute to Paducah with tobacco.

Marriage License.

DIES IN MINNESOTA

Former Crittenden County Girl Passes Away At St. Paul Minn.

DAUGHTER OF MR. M. T. WORLEY

Mrs. Lewis J. Schuman, St. Paul, Minn., died Tuesday Feb. 12th, 1907. The death was very unexpected and the news was received by her father, M. T. Worley, in shape of telegram containing the announcement, but no details.

Mrs. Schuman was before her marriage Miss Annie Worley, of this county. She was married four years ago since which time she has resided in St. Paul where her husband is a brick mason and a fine workman. She was thirty-one years of age and leaves besides her husband two little girls. She professed religion at Crooked Creek several years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Worley have the sympathy of every one in the loss of their last daughter. Gilbert and Charley Worley are Mrs. Schuman's brothers. James M. Gilbert, of this county, is her grand father, Rowe Gilbert is her uncle.

WHERE BABY WENT

Mistake of Farmer's Wife Who Thought Bear Was Husband.

Afton, Va., Feb. 8.—Mrs. James Ingram, wife of a young farmer, lost her infant in a fearful manner a few days ago. It was agreed that her husband should meet her at a fence near a small body of woods, take their child and accompany her to the home of a neighbor, where there was to be a dance. When the young woman reached the fence she saw a figure dimly outlined on the other side. Believing it to be her husband she handed the child over as she climbed the lower panel. To her amazement the figure disappeared without a word, taking the baby with it. Frantic with fear, she called her husband, whom she met coming toward the fence. The alarm was given and a search made, but nothing could be found except the tracks towards the mountains. There is no doubt but that the bear devoured the child.

Even From The Mountains

Ballard's Snow Liniment is praised for the good it does. A sure cure for Rheumatism and all pains. Wright W. Loving, Grand Junction, Colo., writes: "I used Ballard's Snow Liniment last winter, for Rheumatism and can recommend it as the best Liniment on the market. I thought at the time I was taking down with this trouble that it would be a week before I could get about, but on applying your Liniment several times during the night, I was about in 48 hours and well in three days." Destiny.

Whenever a statesman is unable to defend a thing which he wants to have done he usually hides behind the plea that it is destiny. That the readers of the Commoner may be able to answer this destiny argument the following quotation is given from the "Last of the Barons," by Bulwer, William of Hastings is described as laying his sins at the door of destiny, and the author makes this comment: "It is destiny!—phrase of the weak human heart! It is destiny! Dark apology for every error! The strong and virtuous admit no destiny! On earth guides conscience—in heaven, watches God. And destiny is but the phantom we invoke to silence the one, to dethrone the other!"

Each man's destiny is in his own hands so far as his moral progress is concerned. If a man is going to be a thief, circumstances may determine whether it is his destiny to escape punishment or to be caught, but the man decides for himself the all important question whether he will be a thief. And so circumstances may determine how much profit or how little profit a country can find in a policy of imperialism, but the country itself must decide—the people or those whom the people permit to speak for them—what the policy of the country will be—Destiny is indeed the dark apology for many national errors.—The Commoner.

THE MAN WHO BUILT OUR RAILROAD DEAD.

Capt. S. S. Brown Worth Only $3,000,000 Instead of $15,000,000

Pittsburg, Feb. 6.—[Special]—The late Capt. S. S. Brown, noted horseman and coal operator, was worth, at the time of his death, $3,000,000 instead of $15,000,000, as was reported at this time. This was learned to-day by the filing of the first account by the executors of the estate, W. Harry Brown and the Union Trust Company.

Several startling features marked the accounting. The libraries, at the city and country homes of the deceased, which he estimated were worth $50,000 are appraised at only $133, while the famous Astoria Cup, won by Capt. Brown's racing stable is valued at only $50. The cup and libraries were bequeathed to Miss Lewis, who has since married a man named Porter, one of Capt. Brown's betting commissioners. Miss Lewis also inherited thirty bonds of the Pittsburg Brewing Company, for accepting which she was forced to resign as a Sabbath-School teacher in the Mary S. Brown Memorial chapel. These bonds are valued by the executors at $33,900. Sixty shares of stock in the Latonia race track were sold by the executors for $13,440 while 240 shares in the Memphis Jockey Club brought $15,880. The stock in the Lexington track has been retained, it is said, by Harry Brown who also continues the racing stable of his deceased brother.

The yacht Troubadour, in which Capt. Brown took many hunting trips to the Red river country, has been sold for $2,900, much less than it cost the late owner to furnish the craft.

OLLIE JAMES

Secures Appropriation That Will Greatly Benefit Our Farmers.

Representative Ollie James, of this district, secured in the Lower House of Congress last week an amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill whereby part of the $150,000 fund appropriated for examination of examination of insects destructive of agriculture is given for purpose of investigating tobacco worms and insects injurious tobacco.

The house, after a speech from Mr. James on the subject and regardless of the opposition of chairman of the committee, Mr. Wadsworth, sustained Mr. James and included tobacco insects in the investigation.

Mr. James said that tobacco growers in Western Kentucky and Tennessee, to which the amendment applies, are already hampered by the government placing a tax of 6 cents a pound on leaf tobacco, which enables the trusts control the markets.

He said that he made his appeal in behalf of the tobacco growers of the Dark Tobacco region, and thought it only justice that part of the appropriation should be used for their relief.

And here you wonder why, no doubt,

The face displayed a Cupid's bow—
Oh, yes, indeed, I fully know
That's but the ordinary thing
Upon the season's offering.

IT had, forsooth, a plump red heart
Transfixed by Cupid's flying dart.
But hearts, you say, are ornaments
With which no valentines dispense!
The tender message that it bore—
You've often conned such greetings o'er?
The tenor you can tell thereof?
"I'm thine—be mine—forever—love!"

BUT as exhibit Number Five
I'll state, dear reader, 'twas alive—

The message, old, yet ever new,
May some one whisper thus to you.

St. Valentine's Call

A Story of Cupid's Day
By VIRGINIA LEILA WENTZ

[Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Purcell.]
BUT, my dear girl, it's only for one night—the manager began to expostulate.
"I won't dress in that pen, I tell you. Of course you think I'm in a temper and taking advantage of my red hair and all that, but I'm not. I'm merely firm, and you'll have no Lady Capulet tonight."

Miss Miranda of the Titian tinted locks had been consigned to a bad dressing room, a tiny partitioned space three flights up, with a leak in the roof that let the water through, and it was raining!

"Never mind, dear," said Miss Marlon Gray, the Juliet of that night's performance. "You may share my dressing room."

"Well, fix it up between you, girls," admonished Mr. Washington Cohen, with a wave of his hand and a sigh of relief. Then he went to don the cotton velvet of the Montagues, for he was not only business manager, but Romeo as well.

"Do you know," observed Miranda, slipping on her soiled kimono and ensconcing herself, with her makeup box, before the speckled, cracked mirror, "next Wednesday I'll be St. Valentine's day, and we play Kansas City that day?"

"Yes?" The travel worn little Juliet was mending one of the silver lilies on the friar's cell gown and wondering if they'd yet found the balcony rail. Last time she played the scene she'd had to do without it, and the setting was spoiled.

"Uh-huh," repeated Miranda, energetically rubbing the cold cream into her face. "I'm glad it's Kansas City, because my best beautiful lives there, and, being St. Valentine's day—well, I'm going to sit right down as soon as I'm through here and warn him to have something pretty spanking nice for me."

St. Valentine's day! Had it really come around again? Later, waiting in the cold, windy wings for her cues, the thought of it stayed with Marlon. How vividly she recalled the day two years ago! Instinctively her fingers closed on a little hard substance close to her heart under the folds of her Juliet gown.

When she went back to the stuffy dressing room Miranda was just finishing her threatened letter, between sentences dabbling retouches of rouge on her cheeks with a rabbit's paw. Mr. Washington Cohen looked in the open door and laughed.

"At it again?" said he.

"At what again?" tossed back Miranda over her shoulder.

"That perfect face, my dear lady," bowed he, with mock gravity. "Why paint the lily, why retouch the rose?"

quoth he blandly, going on his way.

Just then came a loud knock at the character man's dressing room, a few

"I WON'T DRESS IN THAT PEN, I TELL YOU," doors below. The call boy had fetched a half dozen black bottles of beer and some thick glasses on a cheap japanned tray.

"Come in and join me, girls," called the character man cordially, wiping his lips after his first long draft. And Miranda, putting an extra loading of cosmetic on her lashes, went. Marlon Gray had promised to mend the lining of Mercutio's cloak, so she stayed behind.

Her eye fell on Miranda's letter. Why shouldn't she, Marlon Gray, write a letter too? Again her fingers tightened on that little, hard, hidden substance. She smiled for a moment softly, capriciously. Then, almost reverently, she drew it out to the length of her chain. It was a small silver heart, locked with a silver key.

The face that looked at her from the ocket seemed to fascinate her. It was months since she had allowed herself to peep at it, but now—why, almost he seemed to be speaking to her in his own, tender southern drawl.

"Yes, if you've set your heart on it, dear," he was saying. "I reckon you'll have to go. But I shall keep on patiently with my work, loving you just the same. Who knows? Some day my little Marlon may want me, and I must lay up against that day."

"For heaven's sake, let the old cloak go and come in and have a beer!" came hoarsely from the character man's dressing room.

"I'm busy," the girl called back vaguely. She was listening to the voice of the man looking up at her from the locket.

"My little sweetheart is one of those who must go out into the world and buy experiences for themselves," the low voice was explaining, half to itself and half to her. "Those who hinder her are only hurting her. But some day, when she's tired, she may be right glad to lean on some one whom she can trust!"

"What the dickens is the matter, Juliet?" called Miranda mockingly. "You're jolly slow company tonight."

"—but she must be tired first," the voice went on. "When one is tired one's heart cries aloud. And it is then that those who love us will not fail us. Take this, dear"—he was handing her the locket again, just as he had two years back—"and if ever you want me send me the little key. I shall understand. And, no matter where or how far you may be, the call will fetch me to you."

Marlon pushed back her heavy hair from her eyes with the back of her hand and, finding the touch of her fingers cool to her brow, let them rest there for a second.

Ah, hadn't she had a wonderful little evening of it, though, that dear St. Valentine's day! She was to start on her first theatrical engagement in the morning, and there was all the beautiful excitement of the untired life staring her in the face. How for sheer joy she had smiled at everything.

"Wait till I come back to you with fame and wealth, my dear boy," she had bubbled laughingly to her lover, little heeding the wounding of her words, "and then—and then!"

With fame and wealth! Oh, Mercutio's painted cloak which lay across her lap, and Juliet's gown embroidered with tinsel lilies, which hung over the back of a chair, how they stood to her for the splendence that she had meant to have for her own—vague repugnance made up of empty pageantry! She had fancied herself in trailing, folded garments, moving like a princess in and out among perpetual flowers and bird song. There had been instead unspeakable drudgery, cheap hotels, freezing—or stifling—theaters, endless journeys with continual fatigue.

As the girl's beautiful, tired eyes rested again on Miranda's envelope she rose, as though under a spell, and, taking one more long look at the face in the locket, she kissed it with a little joyful half sob. Then she detached the silver key.

When Miranda came back into the dressing room there was another sealed note lying beside her own waiting to be mailed.

In Kansas City just before the half hour call was given one of the stage hands rapped on Miss Gray's door and handed her a violet box tied with violet ribbons.

Marlon opened it, with a sudden, exquisite thought springing into her mind and making her dizzy with sheer joy. Her pale cheeks went pink, like the flush of a wild rose, as she searched the box feverishly for the card.

Ah, there it was! And the old familiar handwriting! She stood perfectly still for a few moments, trembling visibly. Then she bent her head under the miserably poor wired gas jet and read—just a few lines, signed with a certain foolish little name they both knew, but eloquent with meaning.

The great double violets smiled up in the girl's face. She raised their dewy fragrance close against her hot cheeks.

"He's heard my Valentine call, dear flowers," she whispered into their hearts, "and he's coming for me tonight! Oh, he's coming for me tonight!"

An Ancient Definition.

An old writer who lived many years before the Matthews-Roosevelt reformed spelling was promulgated defined a valentine to be "ye friste of mankynde that a mayde shalle see on ye Saynte Valentyne's daye or ye friste mayde that a man shalle see on Saynte Valentyne's morn."

Emulates Carrie Nation

Louisville, Feb. 6.—With her little ax Mrs. Kate Morrow, of Utica, emulated Carrie Nation and destroyed a store at this place conducted by William Emmerke, who is as the head of the social club incorporated for athletic purposes under the laws of the state.

Mrs. Morrow went to the club house Sunday afternoon and found her husband Sherman Morrow, with others sitting around the stove. She then proceeded to knock down the stove.

She asked him to go home, and he did not comply with the request. She then proceeded to knock down the stove pipe and demolish the stove satisfied with her work, she retired, and threatened to return if the husband did not accompany her home.

He went home and Monday Emmerke caused her arrest on a charge of malicious trespass. She was presented in Magistrate Andrew Lewis court, and the case went over until Wednesday afternoon.

A Poet's Corner In Valentines

By ROBERTUS LOVE

[Copyright, 1907, by Robertus Love.]

THE poet and the funny man—two in one—was stalled in a lively little city in North Dakota. He was doubly stalled, being both snow bound and broke. Either chain would hold him for some days to come. To get out of town he had first to get out of his hotel by paying his bill. This, however, was a delicate secret which he had no intention of sharing with his landlord, who looked upon him as a celebrity. But getting out of town was impossible even to a multimillionaire. The railroads were tightly tied up in all directions by drifts of packed snow in the deep cuts, and the snow was still falling and still drifting.

It was not his own fault that the poet and the funny man was fundless. He had counted upon reaching the next town and collecting a fat fee for an entertainment which he was to give there before his money gave out. Now, to know that he would miss his date and that he must "jump" 400 mortal miles to his next engagement, and he must buy railroad transportation for the jump. The poet was melancholy over his prospects, and even the funny man was feeling almost blue. It is a handy thing to be a funny man as well as a poet, for the ability to appreciate the humor of a situation—well, that helps some.

But now the funny part was all buried, like the trains in the snow packed cuts, and it was only the melancholy poet who sat in the office of the Grand Central hotel and looked blue. Nonchalantly he glanced at the big calendar above the clerk's desk. The letters on the sheet read, "February 10."

"Huh!" the poet grunted. "Close to St. Valentine's day, but I guess there'll be no valentine for me. Wires all town. Can't get in touch with the lecture bureau or anybody else for the touch that I so long for. I'm here for a week anyhow if this snow keeps up and just 30 cents in my pocket. Well, I feel like 30 cents." And here the funny man came up to the surface for a brief airing.

Just then a long haired individual wearing a wasp waisted overcoat that reached from ears to heels entered the hotel office and walked up to read the names on the register.

"Ha!" he ejaculated. Then he strode over to the poet and extended a long, lean arm tipped with truly professional fingers.

"I have the honor," he said, "to greet the distinguished poet and humorist, Mr. James Alexander Bard; recognize you by your lithographs. I'm Blank-Burhard Bennington Blank, talk talk artist. Snow bound here; missed all my dates for a month; been?"

"I recognize you also by your lithographs, Mr. Blank; glad to meet you," said the poet.

"Brothers in distress," remarked the talk talker.

"Truly," assented the poet, with feigned meaning.

"My distress, however, is deeper than yours, I imagine," said the talk talker in a confidential undertone. "Fact is, Mr. Bard, I'm dead broke, and if you could manage to let me have—"

"Only too happy, Mr. Blank, but," likewise in an undertone, glancing aside at the smiling hotel clerk across

"UP HERE WE'RE CELEBRITIES," the room, "I have 30 cents and a postage stamp. Might let you have the stamp."

"Funny situation," said the talk talker.

"Awfully," agreed the funny man, laughing a muffled, mournful laugh. "What are we going to do about it, Blank?" anxiously inquired the poet, with a long face.

"Oh, we'll see. Let's take a look around town."

Arm in arm the two platform entertainers went out into the whirling, swirling, sweeping snow. They strode down the main street—persons of their profession, you know, always stride—and glanced into the store windows.

"By Jove! Not a valentine on sale in the whole blessed burg!" exclaimed the talk talker. "Why, I was here last year about this time, and the stores were filled with valentines. One of the merchants told me this was the best valentine market in North Dakota; said everybody bought and sent valentines, from the baby to the oldest inhabitant. What can be the matter?"

A glimmer of intelligence pervaded the poet's countenance.

"Valentines all snow bound, like us," he ventured. "Didn't get in before the blizzard, I guess."

Then a light that never was on sea or land illumined the features of the talk talker. He struck an attitude that was striking indeed.

"Bard," he cried, his voice vibrant with a vast joy, "here's an idea that will get us out of the hole and out of town if the snow ever melts!"

"I don't see it," dolefully replied the poet.

"Huh! St. Valentine's day only four days off and not a valentine in town. Babies bawl for valentines. Girls giggle for 'em. Men mourn for 'em. You're a poet. I'm an artist. You write serious poetry—sentimental stuff; also funny poetry. I draw fancy pictures; also funny pictures. My managers call me 'the lightning artist.' Are you a lightning poet?"

"Well, you know I got my reputation by writing a column of verses every day for a newspaper."

"Sure. Now, listen. Here's the biggest notion store in town. We'll see the merchant—how's this for a big notion?—and give him a corner."

"A what? This store is already on a corner."

"Oh, say! Shake the kinks out of your intellect, Bard. We'll give this corner store merchant a corner on valentines."

"A—corner—on valentines?"

"Yes—poet's corner, so to speak. See? You write the poetry; I'll draw the pictures. See the possibilities? You and I don't cut much of a figure down in the big cities, but up here we're celebrities. Notice how the people are standing out here in the snowstorm to get a look at us?"

"That's due to your long hair."

"We'll sign these valentines, some of them," the talk talker continued, disregarding the poet's thrust. "Mr. Merchant will advertise the thing in the newspapers, and we'll make more money out of it than we could get out of a dozen platform dates. See?"

At last the poet saw, with the aid of the funny man.

The conspirators entered the store. Half an hour later they emerged, each carrying a triplicate copy of a contract which assured him a third share in the profits of the venture. The merchant was to serve as press agent, do the paid advertising, keep mum as to the contract and let them do the rest.

Four busy nights and days followed for Messrs. Bard and Blank in their rooms at the hotel. Blank drew valentines and Bard wrote valentine poems by the hundreds.

By the morning of Feb. 11 the whole town was aware and agog. It was an event, an epoch. The two daily papers, carrying full page advertisements, vied with each other in giving free news space to the novel experiment.

"The celebrated poet and artist," editorially remarked one of the papers, "have kindly consented to see that this town, in spite of the distressing storm, shall not go valentineless. Art and genius come to the aid of love. They are indeed our friends in need."

When the funny man in a moment's respite from the poet's terrific labors glanced at this squib he doubled up with laughter.

"We are indeed in need," he said softly, "but they don't know it, and if Mr. Merchant keeps his agreement they won't."

As the valentines fell like autumn leaves from pen and pencil they were displayed in the big show windows. The sale was like a bargain rush. Toward the last the autograph valentines were auctioned off. The bidding was most spirited. One of the poet's most touching quatrains, written and signed in exactly two minutes, on a big sheet, with a red heart drawn and signed by the talk talker in thirty seconds, was knocked down to the town's most eligible bachelor for $30. A "comic" which hit the fancy of the new postmaster because he perceived that it would "hit" his late hated rival went for $7.50.

And a train got in the day after St. Valentine's! As poet and talk talker paid their bills from the $271.10 which each received as his share of the proceeds from this nefarious scheme the funny man came out boldly from temporary retirement and murmured softly:

"O poesy, what crimes are committed in thy name!"

But Yet A Woman

By TOM MASSON

[Copyright, 1907, by Tom Masson.]

AS he put his arm around her, while his hand clasped hers and he held her so close that her fair hair brushed his forehead, he said:

"My dearest, I have been thinking over our wedding trip and trying to plan the details so that you will get the most out of it. Quite appropriately, we shall start on St. Valentine's day. We shall not hurry, but go as the whim seizes us, and you can choose your own route—London, Paris, Rome, the Rhine, anywhere you say."

And she replied, looking far off, with a certain wistful gaze:

"What do I care about all that, dear, so long as I know that you love me?"

Then he went away and pondered over this admission, thinking from the depths of his man's experience that it was not quite right somehow. It did not seem so human, so girl-like, as he had been taught to expect. And the next night he came again and said:

"Darling, when we are married we shall have a home—a real, true home. And you shall furnish it yourself, dear, just as you want it. Nothing shall be denied you. Money shall be no object."

And she replied very simply:

"Ah, my dearest, what does all that matter so long as I know that you love me?"

And again he pondered her reply and asked himself if this, after all, was the ideal love that his heart so craved. It seemed too good to be true. And once again he came back and said:

"My heart's own, you would like two homes, I know, one in the city and one in the country, and horses and servants and jewels and all that makes life beautiful. All these shall be yours."

And she smiled gayly as she replied:

"As if I cared, dearest! As you love me, all my heart is satisfied."

And the man went away again, pondering more deeply, for still he was not satisfied. "One more test," he exclaimed. So the next night he said:

"Dear, I find that I have given you a wrong impression. Careful examination of my assets convinces me that we shall have to begin in a very small way—a short trip to Niagara, a seven room flat and ten days' vacation in the summer. What do you say? Is it all right?"

"AH, MY DEAREST, WHAT DOES ALL THAT MATTER?"

And a tear stood in her eye as she replied:

"I was afraid something was wrong, for now I know you do not love me!"

A Funny Valentine

By FRANK H. SWEET

DID you ever find a Valentine Beside you in your bed. When you heard your papa saying, "Wake up, my sleepy head! Wake up, wake up! pour eyes will shine To see your funny Valentine?"

DID you ever have a Valentine All soft and warm and sweet, With a little roily polig head And mites of hands and feet— Wrepped up in a flannel, oh! so tight, And 'frail of one wee bit of light?

WITHOUT A TOOTH TO BITE ITS BREAD.

DID you ever have a Valentine (My sakes! I want to laugh) So heavy that they said it weighed Just nine pounds and a half, Without a tooth to bite its bread Nor any hair upon its head?

IHAD one just this morning To hear my papa saying, "Wake up, dear sleepy eyes! This funny little Valentine Is mamma's baby, pouts and mine!"

WANTED TO RIDE.

[A Sketch, Written for the Hogwallow Kentuckian.]

You tell Lat Bird-sall! I'm going to kill him the next time we come face to face."

Bird-sall was given the notice, and returned this reply: "And tell Ed Clay on he had better have his eyes open for I'll be prepared for him when we meet."

Such was the word passed by two men prominent in Kentucky neighborhood, through a friend of both.

For weeks the two carried guns in good shooting condition, ready for firing on the spur of the moment. Friends on either side kept the two out of each other's sight.

But on a summer's morning while Bird-sall was coming from town he saw Clayton coming along the road.

Both were horseback. Both grew pale and cool, for the time, the crucial moment had come,—when the slowest man would be shot.

They were a hundred yards apart. The horses walked. Each man looked straight ahead, with his eyes on his enemy.

Slowly the distance between them grew less, until they looked each other squarely in the face, only ten feet apart. With eyes cold and hard each man watched the other's right hand, which rested in his coat pocket.

Each was waiting for the other's hand to move even an inch, and then the firing would begin.

The horses were now opposite each other. Both men rose in their saddles, ready to draw their guns—and just at that moment a young girl came through the bushes with a bucket of blackberries, and walked toward Lat Bird-sall, her father, saying,

"Oh, pap, let me ride behind you home! I'm so tired! I've walked all over these old fields."

The horses never stopped, and Ed Clayton raised his hat as his animal jogged along.

STOMACH ACHE

You have more or less trouble with your stomach, your bowels and your liver—everybody does. And when these delicate and easily-disordered organs get out of order, they are the worst things in the world to you. If you took the right kind of care of them, you wouldn't suffer, but you don't.

The only way you can correct the trouble you do have and prevent these parts from getting out of order is to use

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

Everybody knows that PEPSIN is good for the stomach, but in combination with certain plant drugs by DR. CALDWELL'S formula, its natural value is highly increased. DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN is the best thing in the world for correcting and curing all forms of stomach trouble—you'll say so when you try it. DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN can be obtained in both dollar and half-dollar sizes at all druggists, and your money will be refunded if it fails to benefit you.

Your postal card request will bring by return mail our new booklet, "DR. CALDWELL'S BOOK OF WONDERS," and free sample to those who have never tried this wonderful remedy. Mail your postal today.

A fellow from the neighborhood of Thunderation was buried a few days ago at the Dog Hill grave yard. While it is generally believed that he was dead there is some room to believe that he was not, therefore Fletch Henstep has been appointed to guard the graveyard at night.

The singing held at Rye Straw last Sunday was not very well attended as it had become generally known who all was going to sing. No difficulties took place, and aside from the fact that several mules broke loose while the singing was going on nothing exciting or interesting occurred. Dock Hooks, the leader sung base and all the way through kept a few notes behind so that the crowd could hear him good. Miss Fruzie Allsop carried the tinner part, and once got so high that the owls roosting in the loft had to move.

Fit Smith's drove of daws were very frightened last night when they treed a strange something up a tree near the Gander Creek bridge, and would not go near until Fit went and got his shot gun. An attempt was then made to capture it and both Fit and the daws were greatly surprised when it turned out to be Tobe Moseley. When he climbed down he had a sack on his shoulder that contained a side of meat. It was after midnight and Tobe refused to explain away the strong circumstantial evidence.

A discussion will take place at the Hog Ford church Monday and Tuesday night's on the following question: If the earth was only about 600 years old when the flood came, (as is gathered from the 8th chap., 13th verse, Genesis) how was it that Seth, who said the scrub hog with a sob, "but I certainly wish I could put up as swell an appearance as you do. Now even if I was slick and fat I'd have to go and disgrace myself by rooting up somebody's potato patch, and when my temper got the least bit aroused the hair down on my back would rise up like a yellow dog's."

The scrub hog was low spirited—disgusted with itself—and after the fine hog had strolled away, it went over and laid down in a mud hole. "Well, there's one consolation: The fine hog can't get the comfort out of a mud hole that I can for he'd spoil his looks while a coat of mud improves me by hiding my spare-ribs and back-bones."

At last hog-killing time, which is truly the judgment day in the hog world, came, and the fine hog and the scrub one stood side by side, when the owner passed judgment.

"Well men, kill this big black one. He'll weigh three hundred. And this razor back, well turn him in the corn field. He's not fat enough to kill!"

Moral: Cheer up.

Safe, Sure and Speedy.

No external remedy ever yet devised has so fully and unquestionably met these three prime conditions as successful as Alcock's Plasters. They are safe because they contain no deleterious drug and are manufactured upon scientific principals of medicine. They are sure because nothing goes into them except ingredients which are exactly adapted to the purposes for which a plaster is required. They are speedy in their action because their medicinal qualities goes right to their work relieving pain and restoring the natural and healthy performance of functions of muscles, nerves and skin.

Alcock's Plaster are the original and genuine porous plasters and like most meritorious articles have been extensively imitated, therefore always make sure and get the genuine Alcock's.

Gas Pipes of Paper.

Gas pipes of paper are being made in France. Manila paper is cut into strips equal to the length of the pipes to be made. They are then placed in a receiver filled with melted asphalt and wrapped around a core of iron until the desired thickness is reached. After being submitted to a strong pressure, the paper is coated with sand, cooled, the core withdrawn and the outer pipe surface covered with a waterproof preparation. It is claimed that these pipes are good as, and more economical than, metal ones.

The 2 Hogs.

[Children's Story from Hogwallow, Kentucky.]

One day two hogs met in the road. Hogs as a rule do not talk much, outside of fables, so this must be one.

"Why are you so much fatter and finer looking than me," said the runt hog.

"Well," replied the fine looking hog, "I am just naturally a better grade of hog. You are nothing but a common razor-back animal, from descendants raised on acorns and mumpkins, while my ancestors were fed on swill from the fine hotel."

The Limit of Confidence.

Some amusement has been occasioned by newspaper reports of a sermon recently preached by a noted clergyman. He was appealing to the people to repose in their pastors the same degree of trust with which they followed the advice of their lawyers and their doctors. "If," he is reported to have said, "you get a prescription from your doctor, you take the medicine truthfully." Then he paraphrased Tennyson's noble lines thus:

"Yours not to reason why, Yours but to do and die."

We are quite sure that the good man did not realize what an interpretation his words might bear.—New York Medical Journal.

Always to be Depended Upon

When a person gets up in the morning with a dull headache and a tired, stretched feeling, it is an almost certain indication that the liver, or bowels, or both, are decided out of order.

At such times Nature, the wisest and best of all doctors, takes this means to give warning that she needs the help and gentle assistance which can best be obtained from that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pill, which has been in use for over a century.

They are the same fine laxative tonic pill your grandpart used, when doctors were few and far between and when people had to have remedy that could absolutely be depended upon.

Brandreth's Pills can be depended upon and are sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar-coated.

"No," said Ardupp, "I never blow my own horn."

"Find it difficult to raise the wind, eh?" said Bickins.

Neglected Colds Threaten Life

"Don't trifle with a cold," is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in the case of a child. Proper food, good ventilation, and dry, warm clothing are the proper safeguards against colds. If they are maintained through the changeable weather of autumn, winter and spring, the chances of a surprise from ordinary colds will be slight. But the ordinary light cold will become severe if neglected, and a well established ripe cold is to the germs of diphtheria what honey is to the bee. The greatest menace to child life at this season of year is the neglected cold. Whether it is a child or adult, the cold slight or severe, the very best treatment that can be adopted is to give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is safe and sure. The great popularity and immense sale of this preparation has been attained by its remarkable cures of this ailment. A cold never results in pneumonia when it is given. For sale by Haynes & Taylor.

Slaves in the Congo Country.

The Congo Free State embraces 900,000 square miles of territory and has some 17,000,000 of population. The Congo association, originally formed under the patronage of King Leopold, had for one of its chief objects the suppression of the slave trade, and was intended also to open the Congo region to industrial and commercial development. Even if the charges of barbarous cruelties and mutilations be held under reserve, it appears to be proved by the report of the Belgian commission that the natives of the Congo Free State are kept in a condition practically indistinguishable from that of slavery. They are controlled in their goings and comings and in their vocations to a degree that certainly appears to deprive them of liberty and the pursuit of happiness, even if it does not in some cases deprive them of life itself.—New York Times.

Use a little KODOL after your meals and it will be found to afford a prompt and efficient relief. KODOL nearly approximates the digestive juices it digests what you eat. It is sold on a guaranteed relief plan. Sold here by J. H. Orme.

A CONDENSED ROMANCE.

[A Sketch. Written for the Hogwallow Kentuckian.]

And it came to happen that a young woman's lover went to a far away land and remained so long that he became married to another.

The young and forsaken woman grieved a long year or two, and then decided it was better to be married badly than not at all, and she got ready to embrace the first chance.

Presently an old man came along and she accidentally smiled at him, and he wanted her to become his wife. Then closely following came another one, who was young and good to look at, but he was poor—why, he hadn't have over sixty cents to save his soul, while the old man had great wealth.

"Oh!" she hissed to her image in the mirror. "I must marry! That's a foregone determination. Now which shall it be? I love neither, but like them both. And I think I would be acting a mighty fool if I choose the moneyless man. I'll take the old fellow! He cannot live long and after he has done the Supreme Shuffle I'll still be a fascinating young lady, with my nest warmly feathered with kale-seed, and then I'll wait and wait—and who knows? my own lover may stray back to me again."

Well—anyway, she married the old gentleman, and he was tickled nearly to death.

They both lived, however, and after a lapse of time equal to ten years had passed, the young wife stretched out and died. The old man lived happily onward and succeeded in marrying again.

Bile Poison

has a very bad effect on your system. It disorders your stomach and digestive apparatus, taints your blood and causes constipation, with all its fearful ills.

Thedford's Black-Draught

is a bland tonic, liver regulator, and blood purifier.

It gets rid of the poisons caused by over-supply of bile, and quickly cures bilious headaches, dizziness, loss of appetite, nausea, indigestion, constipation, malaria, chills and fever, jaundice, nervousness, irritability, melancholia, and all sickness due to disordered liver.

It is not a cathartic, but a gentle, herbal, liver medicine, which cures without irritating.

Price 25c at all Druggists.

In 1570 Queen Elizabeth was presented with a pair of silk stockings by her tire-woman and afterward never wore any other kind.

A Card

This is to certify that all druggists are authorized to refund your money if Foley's Honey and Tar fails to cure your cough or cold. It stops the cough, heals the lungs and prevents serious results from a cold. Cures la grippe cough and prevents pneumonia and consumption. Contains no opiates. The genuine is in a yellow package. Refuse substitutes. J. H. Orme.

Deceived.

"I never was so unhappy in all my life."

"It's Dr. Sawyer, the mean old thing. He is deceiving me. He said my husband needed a rest, and advised California."

"Yes?"

"Well, I spoke about my Cousin Gertrude being out there and suggested that it would be nice for George and me to go together for a good long stay."

"Then the doctor got mysterious, and said: 'Go back to work, George. It isn't rest that you need after all.' There's something queer about the case. I'm awfully worried, and they won't tell me the truth."

A Bitter Speech.

Hilary K. Adair, a western detective, replied to the toast "Detectives" at a dinner in Omaha.

"Speeches pregnant with meaning often help the detective in his delicate work," said Mr. Adair. "Often a speech of eight or ten words will reveal volumes."

"Thus I once knew how things stood in a Milwaukee house when I heard a Milwaukee woman say to her husband, 'Jim, do you know you talk in your sleep' and the man replied, 'Well, do you begrudge me those few words?'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

"WHISKY" COLD CURES.

Danger of Using Alcoholic Mixtures or Coal Tar Tablets.

Laying aside all moral objections against filling up the system with whisky or drugs because one has a cough or cold, the dangerous physical effects should be sufficient to keep one from using these strong medicines.

A thoroughly scientific way to treat a cough and cold as well as a sensible method is to breathe Hyomei through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with ever outfit. The first breath of its healing medication relieves the irritation, and its continued use soon effects a thorough cure.

The best people in—always keep Hyomei in the house during the winter months, at the first symptoms of a cold or bronchial troubles, use the remedies, and prevent serious and lasting illness. The guarantee that—a give with every Hyomei outfit should convince you of its curative powers. A complete Hyomei outfit cost but $1.00, extra bottles if needed 50c, and—a guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

"Character," remarked the thoughtful thinker, "is one thing and reputation is quite another."

"Wherein do they differ?" queried the very young man.

"A good character is a luxury," explained the T. T., "but a good reputation is a necessity."

Neighbors Got Fooled

"I was literally coughing myself to death, and become too weak to leave my bed; and neighbors predicted that I would never leave it alive; but they got fooled, for thanks be to God, I was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It took just four one dollar bottles to completely cure the cough and restore me to good sound health," writes Mrs. Eva Uncapher, of Grovertown, Stark Co., Ind. This King of cough and cold cures, and healer of throat and lungs, is guaranteed by Haynes & Taylor, Druggist 50c.

America's Greatest Playground

NEW YORK CITY has the greatest amusement resort in the world in its Coney Island, which stands unchallenged as the most wonderful example of the development of the modern idea of popular attractions presented at prices rendering them available to all classes. Coney Island is unique in many respects, but it was the first place in the world where first class attractions were ever opened to the public for an admission price of ten cents. The attractions have steadily improved in quality at Coney, but the price remains the same.

Coney has not always been the resort it is to-day, its earlier history was not of the sort that makes cities great or adds in the development of good citizenship. Twenty years ago there were shows there, ten cent shows, but they were not characterized by any attempt to elevate the public or amuse the better classes. At one time it was essentially a tough resort where crooks and thieves and politically it was the rottenest of Brooklyn's many disgraceful districts. The public and an improved public sentiment is largely responsible for the changes that have been wrought, but much can be credited to a new generation of amusement producers who have selected Coney Island as a headquarters.

Fire and the Courts have assisted in the change, for several great conflagrations wiped out the worst section of the place, and the courts sent corrupt police officials, who aided in the corruption of the place, to Sing Sing. But all the fires and all the courts could not have accomplished as much as Thompson & Dundy wrought when they opened Luna Park's gates to the public, and set an example in producing attractions of real merit surrounded by artistic structures from designs by architects of national repute.

From a place where many people went, but were careful to refrain from mentioning the fact, it is now a place where everybody goes and talks enthusiastically of the visit for weeks afterwards. The enthusiasm is warranted for at Coney Island can be seen the most complete example of the results possible by the scientific application of electricity to art. The famous White City, Chicago World's Fair, afforded a splendid spectacle, the Buffalo Exposition marked another advance, but at Luna Park and at Dreamland the builders have brought the art of electrical illumination to the highest degree of perfection it ever has known. Combined, they have been classed as the eighth wonder of the world, and the distinction is merited.

When Luna Park was built it was said it never would pay its owners, and the undertaking was certainly a great risk as it involved the expenditure of nearly two million dollars before a single cent was paid in at the gate. But the people came and Luna Park has been made bigger every season, and it has created a new standard in the amusement world. When the builders of Dreamland announced their intention to build another great amusement resort, almost at Luna Park's doors, persons, who thought they knew, said there was no room for two great places at Coney Island, but time has demonstrated that there is no limit to respect, for these two great places have paid dividends that are fabulous, and they have employed a number of minor artists. The only amusement held by their presence, and the halls w shows had prospered. The clean attractions have made good, and the public has been awakened to the opinion that clean attractions of real artistic merit were what they wanted. In Luna Park and in Dreamland there has never been an attraction offered for public favor that depended on a questionable feature, by allowing the type of the type but no regular course. love of can be undertaken. that is too important to be ignored. The conceptions of genius have found an opportunity at Coney Island, and art and science have been called upon, with lavish hands to make every detail appear in its best light. The greatest spectacle of modern times was probably the Indian Durbar at Delhi, when the wealth and splendor of the Empire of India was marched in review in honor of the coronation of King Edward. Thompson and Dundy realized the universal interest in this event and at Luna Park presented a copy of the spectacle which completeness in every detail and accuracy of reproduction excited the of the artistic world and elicited applause from hundreds of thousands of delighted people who nightly filled a vast amphitheatre devoted to the spectacle.

Just what this feature of one season at Luna Park cost its producers may never be known, but they made it pay and constantly improved and elaborated it during the seasons its was produced. Attractions on the order of "Creation" and "The Deluge" cost a small fortune, and the original production of "Fighting the Flames" required the services of a regiment of men, women and children. The fire fighting force was led by one of the most famous of New York's fire chiefs, and under his charge a body of trained athletes gave the most realistic and spectacular performance of its kind that was even given.

While Thompson & Dundy's Luna Park and Dreamland have been doing their work in the reformation of Coney Island, their efforts would have been seriously impeded if it had not been for the presence of the number of attractions covering a somewhat smaller space, but embodying all of the elements of novelty and ingenuity that characterized the best features of either Luna Park or Dreamland.

Principal among these attractions is Mr. E. J. Austen's "Johnstown Flood," which has been one of the real features of Coney Island for several seasons. It was first produced at the Buffalo Exposition and later removed to Coney Isto this world. All New York goes to Coney Island. The magnate of Wall Street forgets that there are bulls and bears as he shoots the chutes or rides on the scenic railway. The denizen of the lower East Side rubs elbows with the magnate, but they have an object in common and meet on equal terms. Both are bettered by the contact, for one's nature is at its best when one is amused.

The popularity that Coney Island has for New Yorkers may be realized when the size of the crowds is considered. For the past two seasons the number of visitors on Saturdays when the weather was favorable averaged over 300,000 persons, while on occasions like the Fourth of July and Labor Day conservative estimates fixed the number at over 500,000, taxing the full capacity of every method of transportation afforded by the city, which has the most extensive and comprehensive system of transit in the world.

New York leads the nation in many respects, and in no one more than in the amusement line, for all that is new in that line seeks the approval of the New York public, and after that has been secured there is little doubt of its success, for there is no more critical or cosmopolitan public anywhere than in New York City. Other cities have built resorts on similar lines to those followed in the new Coney Island, and at this time there are nearly two thousand amusement parks in successful operation, many of them having smaller reproductions of the features that have made Coney Island famous.

At each of these resorts the management tries to secure the best possible feature, and in this way Coney Island has had a national effect on amusement enterprises, and has bred a taste for attractions that are high in class and instruction. Everywhere there is a steady demand for novelty, something new, something bigger, better and grander than before and the demand must be supplied. The best work of talented minds is constantly called for, and the ingenuity of the inventor is taxed to the utmost to meet the emergency.

And there is money in it for the men who have combined the work of the electrician, the architect and the mechanic. Fortunes have been made and new fortunes await the man who gives the public something that will bring pleasure; diversions no longer meet the demand of the public, for the American pride asks for instruction as well as diversion, and the antics of a clown no longer make a circus any more than a mitty-go-round, a cane rack and a frankfurter stand enclosed in a fence constitute an amusement park. The eye must be pleased and above all the attraction must be clean and wholesome.

Coney Island, with Luna Park and Dreamland cannot be transported from place to place, but every season has witnessed a decided step forward in the development of the amusement resort idea as seen in other cities. The latest feature in the plan is to furnish such attractions as have been recognized as leaders to amusement parks in the smaller cities where an attraction will be given for a run of four to eight weeks, and then moved to another city in a circuit modeled on the lines similar to the great theatrical circuits. New shows in this way will be provided for the patrons of each city, and the attractions will be constantly changing.

The popularity of and the profit to be derived from such attractions as E. J. Austen's "Johnstown Flood" is indicated by the fact that during the Buffalo Exposition it brought its owner $107,000. It was then taken to Coney Island, and in three seasons cleared $300,000 over all expenses, making a grand total of $237,000. Mr. Austen's "Galveston Flood" has also been a money maker, and his two productions, "Creation" and "From New York to the North Pole," each took in more than a quarter of a million dollars in six months.

To make money is the object of every business, and this is no less true of the amusement business than of any other, but the essential qualification of the amusement producer is ability to know what the public wants and how to present it in its most attractive form and at the same time to keep clear of the questionable and tawdry features.

The preceding lesson was devoted to the proper method of cutting and fitting a lining for a dressy bodice or shirt waist. This lesson will tell how to sew hooks and eyes on correctly and how to design original and artistic effects in waists.

SEWING ON HOOKS AND EYES.

The lining is now ready for the hooks and eyes. There are many new-fangled and patented hooks-and-eyes on the market, but for a tight-fitting lining the old-time plain No. 3 hooks and eyes, put on alternately, as shown in the illustration, are perhaps the most satisfactory.

While it cannot be denied that hump hooks are more desirable for closing loose fitting garments than the plain hooks, the plain hooks have the advantage of being easier to fasten and unfasten than those with humps.

After removing the lining from its paper duplicate mark the centre of the front on the paper from top to bottom with a soft pencil or crayon, also mark the outline of yoke tracing in the same way; so that it may be visible through the transparent material which is to form the yoke design.

Upon this paper model baste the all-over lace or fine tucking you wish to use for the yoke foundation, being careful to observe that the centre of the lace or tucking comes exactly over the line marking the centre of the front and neck.

The yoke portion may be made of half a yard of eighteen inch all-over lace with round and crescent shaped medallions of silk, linen, or lace as shown in the illustration, or it may be made of tuck chiffon or flowered net with flower motifs in heavy Point Venise or Irish Lace to give distinction. The fashions in trimmings and garnitures for these smart waists are so elastic that one frequently sees a mingling of two or three kinds of lace, and mixtures of cream and white, ecru and white, and black and white upon the same waist.

Dainty entredoux of hand run tucks form quaint designs in arabesques squares, diamonds, ovals and square shaped insets, outlined with lovely valenciennes insertions and frills.

There is no end to the devices that these seemingly intricate yoke designs can be fashioned into. A look through the scrap bag and through the laces which ornament cast off garments, is apt to disclose many unsuspected treasures in the shape of designs that may be cut out of worn laces (after cleaning them) and used with frills of narrow valenciennes to give distinction and tone to a stunning evening waist.

After you have pinned the lace and medallions or other decorations to the special pattern in a design that pleases your sense of the artistic, these should be firmly basted to the paper to prevent shifting. Do not cut out the neck shape until the outside material is fully ready for the draping, otherwise you run the risk of stretching the neck out of shape.

The proper way to sew hooks and eyes to a tight-fitting lining.

By alternating the hooks and eyes, their aggravating tendency to unhook themselves whilst being hooked is prevented. The tautness of the tight-fitting lining holds them firmly once they are hooked.

Spread the shank of the plain hook when sewing on; this prevents the hook from slipping and holds it on until the waist is worn out.

Sew the hooks with strong waxed thread or twist to the two rows of stitching, as shown in the illustration. This stitching reinforces the edge and also serves as a guide in sewing the hooks and eyes on correctly; that is, with the eyes extended beyond the edge and the hooks set back a trifle, so that when the waist is hooked up, the edges will just meet.

Do not sew sideways through the loops of either the hooks or eyes, but directly from the back. Place at least a dozen stitches in each loop, and do not have the hooks and eyes more than an inch apart; a separation of half an inch is even better in a very tight lining.

to this world. All New York goes to Coney Island. The magnate of Wall Street forgets that there are bulls and bears as he shoots the chutes or rides on the scenic railway. The denizen of the lower East Side rubs elbows with the magnate, but they have an object in common and meet on equal terms. Both are bettered by the contact, for one's nature is at its best when one is amused.

The popularity that Coney Island has for New Yorkers may be realized when the size of the crowds is considered. For the past two seasons the number of visitors on Saturdays when the weather was favorable averaged over 300,000 persons, while on occasions like the Fourth of July and Labor Day conservative estimates fixed the number at over 500,000, taxing the full capacity of every method of transportation afforded by the city, which has the most extensive and comprehensive system of transit in the world.

New York leads the nation in many respects, and in no one more than in the amusement line, for all that is new in that line seeks the approval of the New York public, and after that has been secured there is little doubt of its success, for there is no more critical or cosmopolitan public anywhere than in New York City. Other cities have built resorts on similar lines to those followed in the new Coney Island, and at this time there are nearly two thousand amusement parks in successful operation, many of them having smaller reproductions of the features that have made Coney Island famous.

At each of these resorts the management tries to secure the best possible feature, and in this way Coney Island has had a national effect on amusement enterprises, and has bred a taste for attractions that are high in class and instruction. Everywhere there is a steady demand for novelty, something new, something bigger, better and grander than before and the demand must be supplied. The best work of talented minds is constantly called for, and the ingenuity of the inventor is taxed to the utmost to meet the emergency.

And there is money in it for the men who have combined the work of the electrician, the architect and the mechanic. Fortunes have been made and new fortunes await the man who gives the public something that will bring pleasure; diversions no longer meet the demand of the public, for the American pride asks for instruction as well as diversion, and the antics of a clown no longer make a circus any more than a mitty-go-round, a cane rack and a frankfurter stand enclosed in a fence constitute an amusement park. The eye must be pleased and above all the attraction must be clean and wholesome.

Coney Island, with Luna Park and Dreamland cannot be transported from place to place, but every season has witnessed a decided step forward in the development of the amusement resort idea as seen in other cities. The latest feature in the plan is to furnish such attractions as have been recognized as leaders to amusement parks in the smaller cities where an attraction will be given for a run of four to eight weeks, and then moved to another city in a circuit modeled on the lines similar to the great theatrical circuits. New shows in this way will be provided for the patrons of each city, and the attractions will be constantly changing.

The popularity of and the profit to be derived from such attractions as E. J. Austen's "Johnstown Flood" is indicated by the fact that during the Buffalo Exposition it brought its owner $107,000. It was then taken to Coney Island, and in three seasons cleared $300,000 over all expenses, making a grand total of $237,000. Mr. Austen's "Galveston Flood" has also been a money maker, and his two productions, "Creation" and "From New York to the North Pole," each took in more than a quarter of a million dollars in six months.

To make money is the object of every business, and this is no less true of the amusement business than of any other, but the essential qualification of the amusement producer is ability to know what the public wants and how to present it in its most attractive form and at the same time to keep clear of the questionable and tawdry features.

an exact pattern of the lining with the shoulder seams closed. This pattern must include both the front and back and be in one piece.

To make this pattern it is necessary to open the underarm seams and the dart seams of the fitted lining (taking the precaution to mark the fitted stitching lines with the tracer or with colored thread). Stitch the shoulder seams and press flat. Then spread the whole lining smoothly upon a large sheet of medium weight manilla paper, fasten flat to a board with thumb tacks and mark all the seams, with the exception of the darts, with the tracer, taking particular care to mark the shape and depth of the yoke trimming at both front and back. Trace the neck shape carefully and mark the edge of the back closing, also mark a hem allowance for the edge of the back closing.

After removing the lining from its paper duplicate mark the centre of the front on the paper from top to bottom with a soft pencil or crayon, also mark the outline of yoke tracing in the same way; so that it may be visible through the transparent material which is to form the yoke design.

Upon this paper model baste the all-over lace or fine tucking you wish to use for the yoke foundation, being careful to observe that the centre of the lace or tucking comes exactly over the line marking the centre of the front and neck.

The yoke portion may be made of half a yard of eighteen inch all-over lace with round and crescent shaped medallions of silk, linen, or lace as shown in the illustration, or it may be made of tuck chiffon or flowered net with flower motifs in heavy Point Venise or Irish Lace to give distinction. The fashions in trimmings and garnitures for these smart waists are so elastic that one frequently sees a mingling of two or three kinds of lace, and mixtures of cream and white, ecru and white, and black and white upon the same waist.

Dainty entredoux of hand run tucks form quaint designs in arabesques squares, diamonds, ovals and square shaped insets, outlined with lovely valenciennes insertions and frills.

There is no end to the devices that these seemingly intricate yoke designs can be fashioned into. A look through the scrap bag and through the laces which ornament cast off garments, is apt to disclose many unsuspected treasures in the shape of designs that may be cut out of worn laces (after cleaning them) and used with frills of narrow valenciennes to give distinction and tone to a stunning evening waist.

After you have pinned the lace and medallions or other decorations to the special pattern in a design that pleases your sense of the artistic, these should be firmly basted to the paper to prevent shifting. Do not cut out the neck shape until the outside material is fully ready for the draping, otherwise you run the risk of stretching the neck out of shape.

The proper way to sew hooks and eyes to a tight-fitting lining.

By alternating the hooks and eyes, their aggravating tendency to unhook themselves whilst being hooked is prevented. The tautness of the tight-fitting lining holds them firmly once they are hooked.

Spread the shank of the plain hook when sewing on; this prevents the hook from slipping and holds it on until the waist is worn out.

Sew the hooks with strong waxed thread or twist to the two rows of stitching, as shown in the illustration. This stitching reinforces the edge and also serves as a guide in sewing the hooks and eyes on correctly; that is, with the eyes extended beyond the edge and the hooks set back a trifle, so that when the waist is hooked up, the edges will just meet.

Do not sew sideways through the loops of either the hooks or eyes, but directly from the back. Place at least a dozen stitches in each loop, and do not have the hooks and eyes more than an inch apart; a separation of half an inch is even better in a very tight lining.

BIG BEAUTY SLEEPING DOLL

And Sewing Outfit FREE

THIS DOLL IS NEARLY TWO-THIRDS OF A YARD TALL, the largest and most beautiful great big doll that we ever gave away. She has a magnificent head, with real curls, and lovely big eyes that go to sleep. She wears an immense lace picture hat, trimmed with pretty ribbons. The dainty blouse front and the handsome Eton jacket, gay with ribbon and white embroidery, the beautifully flowered, bell-shaped skirt, delicate lace trimmed underwear, white stockings and white kid shoes, all in the latest style, make the costume perfectly splendid. THIS IS AN ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPH OF THE DOLL.

Send us your name and address for only 24 pieces of our New Art Jewelry Novelties to sell at 10 cents a piece. These are genuine gold plate. Our goods are worn by the best people. Sell these and return our $2.40 received from the sale and we will send you at once this great, big, beautiful, dressed, jointed and sleeping Doll.

WITH HER WE WILL ALSO GIVE YOU THE COMPLETE COMBINATION SEWING OUTFIT, JUST AS SHOWN IN THE PICTURE, BUT MANY TIMES LARGER.

THIS HANDSOME SEWING CASE contains buttons, hooks and eyes, embroidery silk and eight species of sewing silk, including white, black, pink, red, green and blue. This is something which every little girl longs to own. Remember we give this with the doll and you get both premiums together without delay. Write today.
